This book is an autobiographic, historic account of the economic transformation of Saskatchewan from a have not to a have province, due in large part to the development of its power production, transmission, and distribution systems, during the latter half of the twentieth century, as told by a lineman who lived it. The author respectfully dedicates this work to those who lost their lives while bringing power to all parts of the great, and diverse province of Saskatchewan. Includes original text of the Occupational safety and health act of 1970. Risk analysis, risk evaluation and risk management are the three core areas in the process known as 'Risk Assessment'. Risk assessment corresponds to the joint effort of identifying and analysing potential future events, and evaluating the acceptability of risk based on the risk analysis, while considering influencing factors. In short, risk assessment analyses what can go wrong, how likely it is to happen and, if it happens, what are the potential consequences. Since risk is a multi-disciplinary domain, this book gathers contributions covering a wide spectrum of topics with regard to their theoretical background and field of application. The work is organized in the three core areas of risk assessment.
